

Claudicants at work

Intermittent claudication is a common condition in elderly males. The management of intermittent claudication has moved from balloon angioplasty and surgery to exercise. Exercise therapy requires strict invigilation, with the claudicants exercising at maximum pain for 30 minutes twice a week.

The image above shows a claudicant exercise programme in full swing.